Product Description

Process description:

After released by the VET, the half carcasses are divided in leg, shoulder, collars, loin bone in and side. The side is sent to the debone table, where the belly with the rib is removed from it, and then the rib is removed from the belly and is refilled. After that, the rib parts are wrapped in printed polyethylene films and the lefts of the film are rolled up and placed under the film. The packages pieces are sent to the secondary packing room, where they are packed in carton boxes. The cartons are covered, sealed with nylon tape (ribbon), passed through the Edata system, they receive an identification label and are transferred by trolleys to the freezing tunnel where they remain until reaching the temperature of -18 ° C or colder. After freezing, the boxes are palletized. The pallets are wrapped in stretch film and are stored in storage chambers with a temperature below -25 ° C, where they remain until the moment they are dispatched. The production date and expiry date must be stamped on both primary packaging and secondary label.
